Claims 1-14 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a surgical instrument handle comprising; an elongate rod having a center axis that defines mutually perpendicular axial and radial directions, it rod having a length with axially opposite proximal and distal ends; the rod distal end being adapted to be attached to a surgical instrument bead; a piston mounted on the rod adjacent the rod distal end for axially reciprocating movement of the piston toward an away from the rod distal end; a forward grip member reduced on the rod for axial movement between first and second positions of the forward grip member relative to the rod, the forward grip member playing a plurality of resiliar arms that extend along the rod distal ends of the arms that operatively engage with the piston whereby manual movement of the arm distal ends what the tradially inward moves the piston axially toward the rod distal end and movement of the piston axially away from the rod distal end moves the arm distal ends when the forward grip member is in the first position relative to the rod, and there being a second radial spacing between the arm distal ends when the forward grip member is in the first position relative to the rod, the second radial spacing being larger than the first radial spacing.
